“All out Civil War in Iraq: Could It Be a Good Thing?”

This is an actual headline from Rupert Murdoch's Fox network - showing the type of non-credible, partisan reporting that Wall Street Journal readers can now look forward to under Murdoch's ownership.

To see the links of these headlines, and to get more examples of Fox's long record of skewed, unreliable, partisan news, check out www.FoxAttacks.com

Here is an example of Fox's record. Fox Vice President John Moody sends internal memos each morning, dictating what Republican talking points should be reported on air about Iraq.

Here's what he instructed news anchors after the Democratic victory in 2006: "Be on the lookout for any statements from the Iraqi insurgents...thrilled at the prospect of a Dem controlled Congress" (11/9/06)

Fox reporter Martha MacCallum then claimed on-air that terrorists were dancing in the streets over Democratic congressional victory, with no proof. (11/9/06)

On George W. Bush, during start of 2004 election, he wrote "His political courage and tactical cunning are worth noting in our reporting through the day." (6/3/03)

SOME TREES CONTRIBUTE TO GLOBAL WARMING

This is an actual headline from Rupert Murdoch's Fox network - showing the type of non-credible, partisan reporting that Wall Street Journal readers can now look forward to under Murdoch's ownership.

Fox calls global warming a "hoax." Business news anchor Neil Cavuto even said a cold day in winter is "proof that all this hype over global warming could be just that, hype."

Have Democrats Forgotten the Lessons of 9/11?

Fox executive John Moody sends internal memos each morning, dictating what Republican talking points should be reported on

On US troops dying in Iraq: "Do not fall into the easy trap of mourning the loss of US lives and asking out loud why are we there? The US is in Iraq to help a country brutalized for 30 years protect the gains made by Operation Iraqi Freedom and set it on the path to democracy." (4/6/04). Fox anchor Brit Hume then commented on-air about 2000 American deaths in Iraq: "By historic standards, these casualties are negligible."

On Bush tax cuts: "The tax cut passed last night by the Senate, though less than half what Bush originally proposed, contains some important victories for the administration. The DC crew will parse the bill and explain how it will fatten -- marginally -- your wallet." (5/22/03)

"Larry Johnson, a former part-time Fox commentator...[said] Moody missives were 'talking points instructing us what the themes are supposed to be, and God help you if you stray.'" (Washington Post, 7/11/04)

“The #1 President on Mideast Matters: George W. Bush?”

Here are some examples of Fox's record.

Fox smeared Barack Obama: In January 2007, Fox repeatedly aired false charges that Sen. Barack Obama was schooled in a "madrassa." Fox has also actively calls Obama "Barack Hussein Obama" and tries to make an issue of Obama's race. All captured in director Robert Greenwald's short YouTube film, Fox Attacks: Obama.

Fox misinformed viewers about Iraq: A 2003 University of Maryland study found that Fox News viewers were far more likely than other networks' viewers to be misinformed about whether Saddam Hussein was linked to 9/11 Al Qaeda terrorists -- and whether weapons of mass destruction were found in Iraq.
